Mission Statement: To help individuals (beginner to advanced) reach their health, fitness and competitive goals through the sport of triathlon.

Volume X, Issue No. 118

March 2011

IN A FEW WORDS

Dear HVTC,

It takes courage to reach new goals; setting the bar, taking new actions and then living with the reaction of those who love you. “What are you doing?” they ask. I made a promise to myself NOT to be someone you hear saying what they want and never going for it; to me, that’s the ultimate frustration...never DOING what you say you’re gonna do. So, be brave and reach for the stars; HVTC is rising to new heights and I know you’ll be there to enjoy every minute! See ya out there.

Sincerely,
Mark H. Wilson
Professional Life & Triathlon Coach

HVTC Featured Athlete: Chris Loftus

By Mark H. Wilson

What is the meaning of sincere?! Does the definition resonate with the words nice, kind, pleasant? How about friendly? Or special? Does sincerity have a particular feeling associated with it? The computer thesaurus tells us that its synonyms are: genuine, honest, truthful, earnest and heartfelt. Hmm, that pretty much describes our Featured Athlete of the Month, Chris Loftus. Truly, when you're in his presence, you get a sense of absolute attention and eagerness that is reminiscent of one's childhood. He REALLY wants to be talking with you...when he's talking with you; how refreshing! Where and how did he "get" such a feeling for NOW? Read on, Friends.

Hudson Valley Triathlon Club

Volume X, Issue No. 118 March 2011

Chris was born in New Rochelle and then moved to Lexington, New York in the Catskills near Hunter and Windham Mountains when he was two years old. He attended Windham Ashland Jewett High School and went-on to College at Clarkson University in Potsdam, New York and received a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemical Engineering. While in high school, Chris played soccer, tennis and raced Alpine skiing; in college, he raced all four years competitively. The college plan worked well as Chris is a Project Manager for a chemical engineering design firm KMPS and he lives in Chester, New York with his wife Rachel of 2 years; they don't have any children, well, except for their Labradoodle duathlete, Gracie. In his spare time, he eats ice cream. Yum!

The first multisport experience Chris had was back in the late 90's; he raced locally at the Spring Rush (he did the ski, run and canoe legs) and the Killington Triathlon (ski, mountain bike, run). Then, in 2008 he did his first "real" triathlon at the Sodus Point Sprint Triathlon; his inaugural open-water swim...Lake Ontario...3 foot waves. Oh, sweet, Jesus! "It seemed like a good idea." Yeah, maybe for a seal; thank goodness he survived!

However, Chris's true passion and expertise is in ski racing and fishing; Bass fishing to exact. After having qualified for the Collegiate Nationals in ski racing, he wanted to pass-on the knowledge; Chris has coached ski racing for the past 16 years; and, due to work related commitments he was unable to coach in 2010. It's still been a thrilling year for Chris because one of his pupils, Chris Frank, is racing the World Cup Circuit. Nice!!! The Bass fishing hobby has been in his blood for more than twenty years EVERY spring, summer and fall. Chris's lifelong goal was to qualify for the Bass Masters Classic (<http://www.basszone.com/2007zlines/loftus.htm>); it's the sport's recognized championship and there are only 6 amateur slots awarded each year. Well, after years of hard work Chris finally accomplished the task placing 3rd at the Amateur National Championship; qualifying him as 1 of only 6 individuals from NYS to ever fish the Classic in it's 30-year history. Woo-hoo!! And, today, Chris still holds records in the New York Federation including; Most Tournament Wins (6) and Best Record in a Season. Wait, there's more...in 1997, he finished 1st, 2nd, 5th and 1st in the Four Point Tournament. That's it; autographs at the next club race! Good for you, Chris. Unfortunately, Chris's fishin' buddies and competitors think he's lost his marbles with this tri-ath-a-lon thingy; but, of course, those trophies are up for grabs now, too. 'Nother Bud, please!

Now, with his life-long goal squarely under his belt, Chris didn't know what to do next! He didn't have a focus; except for this desire to get into better shape after the Classic...so, he started running. Chris found running to be meditative, but still nothing was coming to him as to what he should do with himself. As he got more fit, he bought a bike and began using that as a way to meet people. It was July 4th weekend and he did a

Volume X, Issue No. 118 March 2011

40 mile ride with some folks and someone asked him if he'd thought about doing a triathlon? Incredibly, the event was only 6 weeks away; so, Chris went to Barnes & Noble and found a book titled, you guessed it "How to do a Sprint Triathlon in 6 Weeks"...perfect! Needless to say, the fishing boat spends most of its time in the garage.

The sport of triathlon hasn't come completely easy to Chris and he admits he has experienced some "pain, pain and more pain" and still loves it; he works hard and is obviously goal-driven. And that's the part about the sport he really enjoys; setting goals, pushing himself, feeling good when he's done, etc. But the part he loves the most is the people... "Rachel and I have formed so many close friendships; I don't think I have met a person in this sport that does not have that glow to them." As a result, he and Rachel tell everyone they can about triathlon and it's benefits.

Speaking of benefits, Chris's triathlon résumé includes; HVTC Summer Tri-Series, West Point Triathlon, and the Cayuga Lake Triathlon (Olympic). "I was thrilled to have improved at every HVTC race last year. And, since I've competed in two National Championships in different sports, I want to do it in a 3rd sport!" Chris wants to qualify for the USAT National Age-Group Championships for the Olympic distance. Fantastic!

Chris would also like to thank some important people; his wife Rachel for her support, his training partner Todd Van Sickle, his coach Penny Sorbello and Barbara Sessa. "Barbara allows me to tag along at her track work-outs; I got to ride Barbs shoulder every Wednesday, last summer." Cool...just remember to take the hook out of her cheek when finished. Thanks, Chris!

Knee Pain & Iliotibial Band Syndrome

By Dr. David Ness

Iliotibial band (ITB) syndrome causes knee pain in runners, long-distance walkers, and bicyclists. It is one of the conditions that is commonly called “runner's knee.” The ITB stretches from the pelvis to the upper part of the tibia, and the muscles of the leg are attached to it. Because the pain sometimes doesn't develop until after activity, it is not always easy to realize that the discomfort is coming from overuse of this large tendon. As we walk, the ITB glides over the knee, from the side to the front and back again. ITB syndrome happens when the gliding becomes more like dragging, and the pain it causes centers just above the outside of the knee.

The irritation which results from ITB syndrome may not be felt for some time after the activity, when the area feels tender. A stinging sensation may be felt over the knee. Swelling or thickening can develop just above the knee, where the band moves over the femur. Some patients report feeling something snapping inside the leg. This is a less common, but more obvious, indication that the cause is ITB syndrome – the iliotibial band is trying to move smoothly over the bone, and failing spectacularly.

Although pain may not develop until afterwards, for some runners it begins during the activity, and may stop when they slow to a walk. Regardless of how it's felt initially, the pain may intensify over time. This can include expansion up the thigh and down the calf, onset earlier in the activity, and more intense pain when the foot strikes the ground.

Causes of this problem may include running on hills and stairs, banked surfaces like road shoulders, cycling with the feet “toed in” excessively, or rowing. Bowing of the legs, either from those activities or anatomical problems like high or low arches, may also lead to ITB syndrome.

Self-treatment of ITBS should include ice, rest, reduction in or changes to training regimen, stretching of the IT Band and associated muscles, massage or foam rolling of the lateral quadriceps and IT Band, and strengthening of the hip abductors. If these treatments do not resolve the problem, a sports medicine professional should be consulted.

Professional treatments which are highly effective on ITB syndrome can include chiropractic care, physical therapy, deep tissue massage or Active Release Techniques can be focused the ITB, Quadriceps, TFL, Psoas, and hip adductors. Custom orthotics for pronators or supinators can help with knee alignment. Some cases call for cortisone shots, or a surgical procedure called a lateral release. These last resort treatments are used for cases that do not respond to any form of treatment and rest.
